

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN

Interrogative pronouns are super important in English grammar. They help ask questions and get specific information. The main ones are “who,” “whom,” “whose,” “which,” and “what.” They replace nouns in questions to make things easier to understand. You can use them to get clear, detailed answers or to show curiosity about people, things, or ideas. Interrogative pronouns have different jobs in sentences, like being the subject, object, or possessive. They make sentences more understandable and can do lots of different things.
